Q.1 In 2008 the British Government designated Hezbollah's armed wing as a terrorist organisation, meaning it can apply sanctions such as having property seized. Later this month, MPs in the House of Commons will debate whether to extend this designation to cover Hezbollah's political wing too. The EU also currently designates only Hezbollah's armed wing as a terrorist organisation, while Saudi Arabia, Egypt and the UAE (plus several other countries) designate all of Hezbollah as a terrorist organisation, and most recently the Mayor of London Sadiq Khan called for the UK Government to extend this designation to Hezbollah's political wing. In light of this, would you support or oppose the UK extending this designation to Hezbollah's political wing?
